Paul Winterbottom

Part 2 Task X1

Describe a person who always has strong opinions

- who this person is
- how you knew him/her
- why you think he/she is an opinionated person

And explain how you feel about him/her

Answer: ending / reflection: chunking

Later, I got to know him better and we became good friends. I realised he was actually very interesting - with extremely strong, clear opinions about almost everything. And often quite original I think. He had read so much - he was really impressive. I wish that I had read as much as he had before I went to university. Unfortunately I had not. I think that if I had done, if I had been better prepared - I would have got more out of it and enjoyed it more too.
